Brazilian supermodel and former Victoria's Secret Angel, Adriana Lima, is parting ways with her Los Angeles estate — a property where the security measures read more like a celebrity protection playbook than a standard home listing.

Priced at $15.995 million, the modern Brentwood compound sits behind custom gates and mature hedging on one of the widest lots in the North Bundy flats, with 120 feet of frontage.

Lima and her husband, film producer Andre Lemmers III, purchased the 7,400-square-foot property only three years ago for $12.35 million, according to The Wall Street Journal, which first reported on the listing.

Adriana Lima's Brentwood home could double as a high-fashion fortress.

The home is completed with an advanced security setup featuring AI-powered cameras and laser beams encircling the property.

After purchasing it, the couple outfitted the newly built home with a high-tech AI-powered camera system, automated laser beams and 24/7 armed patrol service.

"The property has AI-powered cameras that instantly recognize unfamiliar faces and can alert a live security team within seconds," listing agent Paul Salazar of Compass told The Post.

The 0.34-acre lot holds a five-bedroom, seven-bath main residence and a one-bedroom, one-bath detached guesthouse — totaling six bedrooms and eight bathrooms.

The gated drive leads to a two-car garage plus space for four additional vehicles. Outdoor amenities include a resort-style pool, mature landscaping, a fire pit, and an outdoor kitchen — with room to add a sports court.

The primary suite has a private terrace with a fireplace, a walk-in closet with custom cabinetry and island drawers with key-card access for valuables.

Inside, expansive living areas open seamlessly to the grounds. The main kitchen is anchored by dual islands and outfitted with Miele built-ins — including an espresso station, refrigerator, dual dishwashers and a frameless integrated stovetop.

A separate chef's kitchen — ideal for staff or events — features an eight-burner Wolf range, additional refrigeration, and a walk-in pantry.

Other features include a climate-controlled wine rack, a private theater upgraded with over $100,000 in equipment — and smart-home integration that controls lighting, climate, sound and security from wall-mounted displays or an app.

The famous couple shouldn't have a problem selling this stunner home because, according to Salazar, the tandem Brentwood remains strong, with "a ton of families looking for a home" even after the post-fire.

Salazar said in an email that the decision to sell comes as their professional commitments have shifted east.

"Too much of our personal time was taken away by being on the other side of the country and longer travels," he told The Journal in an email.
